Protect Yourself

Financial Advice for Dislocating Workers

The following recommendations are made in order that payments of financial obligations can be arranged during a period of layoff in such a manner as to eliminate any unnecessary hardships. You can help yourself considerably by taking the following actions before you get into trouble. Do not delay! Do it now!

1. Notify your bank, savings and loan association, credit union, or whoever holds the mortgage on your property, that you are on layoff. Notification should be given through a personal visit or phone call with the responsible people holding any mortgage. If you are unable to meet mortgage payments, request a postponement or reduction of payments until you return to work.
2. If you rent, inform your landlord of the layoff. Again, if you are unable to pay your rent, ask for a postponement or temporary reduction until you are called back to work.
3. All utilities (phone, gas, electric and water) should be notified that you are on layoff.

4. If you are making payments on an automobile, furniture or holding accounts at department stores or loan companies and are unable to make payments, you should give notification that you are on layoff and request a moratorium or reduction on your accounts until you return to work.
5. If you are buying property under a land contract, get legal advice on making arrangements for delaying or reducing payments, otherwise there is danger of foreclosure.
6. Men or women – if you are paying alimony or child support, make sure that you contact the judge, domestic relations office or court who issued the decree, and inform them of the situation.
7. Contact your doctor, dentist, medical clinic, hospital, etc.: most of them will wait for payment if asked and informed of the situation.
8. The same is true of most other creditors. Contact them immediately and explain the situation. Some creditors may expect you to pay a small or token amount each week or month, depending on when your payments are due, but at least, it will relieve you from full payments temporarily. If this is the case you are strongly urged to comply with the creditors request. If you make arrangements, be certain that you are prepared to live up to them.

It has been found that if the above recommendations are followed before the problem becomes acute, satisfactory arrangements usually can be made. Of course, this assumes that you have a good record of payment in the past, have not been delinquent or continuously late and have attempted to meet your obligations on a regular basis. It is just good practice to always notify a creditor if you will be late on your payments and the reason for the delay.
